THE NANAIMO INQUEST

Continuation of Evidence as to Explosion.

The Inspector of Mines on the Witness Stand.

NANAIMO, June 18.—The coroners inquest re-opened at 10 a. m. on Friday, when Daniel McDonald, James Price, George Churchill, Walter Ross, R Griffiths and Joseph Randall were examined. Their evidence corroborated the testimony of witnesses already given and published in these columns. To-day we can only find room for the evidence of the Inspector of Mines, which was as follows:

Archibald Dick, sworn, deposed—Am Inspector of Mines. My duty is to inspect a mine at least once in 3 months. Inspected on 3rd December No. 1 shaft; at that time fan was stopped, not working well; 45,000 cubic feet of air traveling per minute; 28th December, down again, did not try the air then and was only in main slope and in No. 3 level. On 9th Jan. went down diagonal slope from one end to the other; did not take air. On 19th Jan. I went down in No. 1 and went through all working part of mine that day; ventilation, 75,000 cubic feet. Fan making 29 revolutions per minute by trial by watch; water gauge 9-10 of inch. On 21st Jan. went into No. 1 level; 1400 or 1500 yards in. On 25th Feb. was down mine; 61,600 cubic feet of air and 175 men in mine. On 6th April was in main slope and diagonal; 73,500 cubic feet of air. On 19th April down again in No 3 north level; last time before explosion, I considered mine was well ventilated. It was frequently remarked to me that it was too cold. Fan is capable of giving three times as many revolutions. Have made a thorough examination of mine and diagonal this week; have been four times in diagonal. I examined face. I found a hole where 2 shots had been fired, 2½ feet above rail. Hole had been fully 5 feet long; hole large enough to turn my hand in pointing down; pitching 5 inches to foot. I found tamping in hole or what appeared so, which led me to believe that it was a hole fired twice. It would strike rib about 4 feet from mouth of hole, and then spread out. I examined between timbers and roof; the last timber is about twelve feet distant from hole. Dross in lagging but not filled up. Went up on lagging and crawled about 12 feet and could have gone further; could see 8 or 10 feet further, could see the lights of people below through lagging; might have been able to go 10 feet further; I went up there to ascertain if space was filled up or not. A blowing up shot on the hole I saw would I think produce a large flame. If gas was present above lagging, nothing else would have kindled it. Heard Griffith's evidence. Explosion in my opinion originated in that hole at foot of slope; my various examinations since explosion confirm this opinion. The brattice between the two cross cuts was standing, but above that it commenced to lean over and as it gathered force it knocked it over still further on. Certain to send air inside; lowest cross-cut was burnt half away. It came up to windlass in counter slope; the standard on left hand side was blown into the one on right hand side was standing; windlass hanging on to it loose and carried up slope. All the force of explosion had an upward tendency and stopping blown out between diagonal and counter slope. I produce pieces of coal taken from McDonald's and Martell's shafts and which show charred. Evidences of destruction grew greater as explosion advanced. I saw a large rock weighing three tons which had fallen from roof carried 10 or 11 feet up slope from the place where it would have fallen naturally. Explosion increased as it went. Have read a good deal about explosion of coal dust. The presence of a large quantity of coal dust with gas would increase powers of destruction. Such explosions gather force as they advance. Diagonal slope was dry and had quite a quantity of dust. It is the dryest mine about here. The shot spoken of was the cause of explosion. It exploded both dust and gas partly in my opinion, but according to firemen's evidence there was no gas. It was possible for gas to have collected after Griffiths ignited it in sufficient quantity by 6 o'clock to cause another explosion, but that would depend upon feeder. I found no gas there as far as I went this morning. The mine was well organized and conducted well. No expense spared to protect life. Fireman who was killed must have examined the place. Some of the dross or lagging might have been shaken down. The gas from slope would be carried away by current. Don't think gas would lodge there. My duty to look after safety of miners; nothing to do with management. If I had seen anything wrong would have reported it. Dryness of slope never struck me as an element of danger. If it had would have taken steps to remedy defects. Did not suggest regulation of shot-firing. Some miners in mine were experienced miners; some experienced miners are more reckless than green hands. Explosion once started ventilation would increase danger. Gas might collect in pot-hole if there was no air to carry it away. I have never known coal dust to explode of itself. I think the stoppings were good. Brick stoppings or stoppings would be better on main. It is possible to construct stoppings so as to confine explosions to the particular localities in which they occur. I do not think curtains of canvas so good as those of wood on main roads, they are tighter than canvas. Never had a complaint from any man in the V. C. Co.'s employ complaining of management, and have given men in both companies to understand that any complaint made to me could be made without anyone being the wiser for it. I believe from what Griffiths says that there was gas where he mentions on the morning of 3rd May, and that it was ignited. I inform and improve myself about mines at my own expense. If I considered dust dangerous in the mine would have thought it my duty to see it rectified. I did not so consider it.

The coroner adjourned the inquest to 7 p. m., and still later on to the 25th July at 2 p. m. Expert evidence of Bryden McGregor and Scott to be still heard.

Attractions at Fulton Market.

Residents of the city, as well as visitors, should not miss the opportunity of visiting Fulton Market, Johnson street, where are to be seen a collection of monkeys, trained; speaking parrots, mocking birds, English thrushes, blank birds and starlings, magpies, and many other species of the singing and feathered tribe. Tourists in want of souvenirs can do no better than give this place a call.

A DAM CASE.

A Conviction by Hon. C. F. Cornwall, J. P., Quashed by County Court.

At County Court held at Spence's Bridge on the 18th instant, an appeal was heard against a conviction made by the Honorable C. F. Cornwall, J. P., against one Luhu, a servant in the employ of Mr. Walter Langley, of Basque Ranch, who was charged by John Dowling, better known as "Oregon Jack," with having inflicted malicious injury upon a dam in Oregon Jack's Creek.

Mr. A. J. McColl, who appeared on behalf of the appellant, stated, that although Mr. Langley appeared before Mr. Cornwall and informed him on the hearing of the charge that Mr. Langley's servant was merely obeying instructions in removing the dam for the purpose of obtaining water from the creek, to which he claimed to be entitled, refused to hear any evidence for the defence, although Mr. Langley offered his own evidence and that of several witnesses. For the appeal it was argued that the defendant was entitled to give evidence, and further that the act was done under a claim of right, and could not be treated criminally, even if Mr. Langley was wrong in his contention that he was entitled to priority to Dowling.

After hearing evidence, the conviction by Mr. Cornwall was quashed with costs, his Lordship stating that the act complained of had been admitted, but its criminal character denied, on the ground that Mr. Langley considered himself entitled to the water by law and under his records, and therefore to the right to remove any obstruction to the flow of water whereby he was deprived of its use; that the section of the criminal law under which the conviction was made, expressly excepted such a case from jurisdiction by the magistrate, as soon as it was made clear to him that Mr. Langley was setting up his right to the water in good faith; that this fact as a defence could only be ascertained by evidence which had been tendered to the magistrate, but which he had improperly refused to take. His Lordship further added that the refusal was practically one prohibiting a man from defending himself, a course directly opposed to the fundamental principle of law, that no man should be condemned unheard. The defendant was entitled to show that the act complained of was done in pursuance of right, and not from mere wanton destruction, which was the offence meant by the statute. The distinction was clearly laid down in Clarke's Magisterial Manual which was read on the point to the magistrate, and the decisions quoted in that treatise should have been followed.

Afterwards in the Supreme Court an order was made by His Lordship on Mr. Langley's application restraining waste of the water by Dowling, and limiting the quantity he can take.

Astonishing Success.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada.

For the Gold Mines.

A number of able-bodied young men have been engaged in this city to work in the Treadwell quartz mill, Douglas Island, Alaska, and will go north on the next steamer. It is reported that Mr. Kyle, of Vancouver, will leave about the 5th of next month to take charge of the mine.

GREAT CELEBRATION.

Extraordinary Jubilee Enthusiasm in London.

Precautions to Prevent Dynamite Outrages.

IMMENSE ENTHUSIASM.

LONDON, June 19.—Three hundred peers and other prominent persons belonging to the Roman Catholic Church have returned tickets entitling them to seats in Westminster Abbey to-morrow during the Jubilee services. The city is already showing signs of being crowded in anticipation of to-morrow. The throngs on the streets are more numerous than at any time within the recollection of the present generation. In some parts of the town the crush of sight-seers impedes traffic in the street. The Queen this morning drove from the Castle at Windsor to the railway station and came to London on a special train. She drove from the station here to Buckingham Palace. Crowds of people lined the entire route in the town and displayed the greatest enthusiasm. Her Majesty was delighted at the loyalty exhibited, and bowed and smiled in every direction. Decorations with banner mottoes and flags are progressing enormously, and when done promise to eclipse anything of the kind ever before attempted in England.

GIFT TO THE QUEEN.

LONDON, June 19.—The joint Jubilee gift to the Queen from all her children and grandchildren will be a gold and silver centre-piece for the table, adorned with precious stones. It was executed in Berlin and comprises three parts resting on a common base, in the centre of which are the British arms bearing the legend, "Her children and grand children to ever beloved mother and grandmother." The middle portion consists of a vase adorned with arms. The portraits of the donors has a solid gold lid surrounded by the royal crown, and to the right and left respectively are the lion and unicorn.

PRECAUTION AGAINST OUTRAGES.

LONDON, June 20.—The police to-day made a thorough search of Westminster Abbey as a precaution against dynamite outrages during to-morrow's event. Two persons attempted to enter the Abbey, but were prevented by the police. An illuminated address from British subjects resident in Boston, Mass., will be formally delivered to Her Majesty this afternoon.

CLEVELAND'S CONGRATULATIONS.

LONDON, June 20.—The Queen this afternoon accorded U. S. Minister Phelps a private audience at Buckingham Palace for the purpose of allowing him to present President Cleveland's Jubilee congratulations. The Queen's demeanor towards him was most cordial. She expressed her warmest thanks for the President's congratulations.

A HEARTLESS MOB.

PESTH, June 20.—A mob yesterday set fire to the Jewish quarter of the town of Dura Szerdahely, in Hungary. The quarter was almost entirely destroyed and one hundred and twenty-five families rendered homeless.

O'BRIEN'S RECEPTION.

DUBLIN, June 19.—Wm. O'Brien arrived here this evening and was received with the greatest ovations witnessed here in many years.

MEMBER ARRESTED.

BERLIN, June 19.—Herr Krakei, socialist member of the Reichstag, was arrested on Saturday the moment he left the legislative building after close of the session.

FORGER ARRESTED.

TORONTO, June 19.—James A. Wilson, the Philadelphia forger, was arrested here last night. He was living with his wife and family under an assumed name for the past two months. His defalcations are reported to amount to $600,000.

A Company of the N. W. Rifles en route—The Rithet Takes Fire.

NEW WESTMINSTER, June 20.—The steamer Rithet leaves here at 4 p. m. for Victoria. Among the passengers are a company of 40 officers and men of the New Westminster Rifles under command of Capt. Scoullar and Lieut. Deane, who go to take part in the Jubilee celebration in Victoria.

A fire was discovered on the upper deck of the steamer Rithet yesterday while in the neighborhood of James Island, but it was extinguished with but little damage to the vessel. The river is again raising rapidly. Weather very warm.

RETROSPECTIVE.

At 5 o'clock in the morning, on the 20th of June, 1837—just 50 years ago this (Monday) morning—a carriage and four dashed up the great Central avenue to Kensington Palace. Its occupants were the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. HOWLEY and the Lord CHAMBERLAIN, the Marquis of Conyngham. It was two hours after midnight when they left Windsor. The morning was a sweet one. The air was fragrant with the perfume of the flowers, shrubbery and foliage lining their route. The birds' song was on the air, but the two grave men traveling at this early hour of the morning heeded nothing but the importance of their solemn mission—which was to call a Queen to the throne of her ancestors, and break the news of the death, at 2 o'clock that morning, of her uncle and predecessor, WILLIAM IV. We are informed that after repeated knocking and thumping at the porter's gate they were admitted into the Court yard, where, after considerable delay, they made themselves heard, and told the attendant that they desired an audience with the Princess VICTORIA on very urgent business. They were informed that the Princess at that early hour was in such a sweet sleep that her attendants dare not venture to disturb her. Then they said, "we are come on business of state to the QUEEN, and even her sleep must give way to that." They were right; for in a few minutes she came into the room in a loose white night-gown and shawl, her night cap thrown off and her hair falling upon her shoulders, her feet in slippers, tears in her eyes, but perfectly collected and dignified. It did not take her visitors long to tell their story. To it she listened with the tenderest of sympathy for her aunt ADELAIDE—for whom, as well as for herself, she asked the Archbishop of Canterbury to invoke the blessing of the Almighty. Lord MELBOURNE, the Prime Minister, was at once sent for and a meeting of the Privy Council called for 11 a. m. The girl-queen was then allowed to go to her mother—the Duchess of KENT—and tell her of the great change that had taken place in her daughter's fortunes.

On becoming calm and reconciled to her altered position—for she was now virtually Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, as well as of the entire British Empire, as then constituted—the maiden Queen's first act was to write a letter of condolence to her aunt, Queen ADELAIDE, begging her to remain at Windsor as long as she pleased. The letter was addressed "To Her Majesty the Queen" at Windsor Castle. She was told that she ought to write "To Her Majesty the Queen-Dowager." But even at that early period of her reign she displayed good judgment and qualities of heart, which have ever characterized her career as maiden, wife, mother and queen. Her reply was, "I am aware of that; but I will not be the first to remind her of her altered position." Eleven o'clock, the hour for meeting her Privy Council, arrived. It met in Kensington Palace. In the Greville diary we are told that never was anything like the first impression she produced, or the chorus of praise and admiration which was raised about her manner and behavior—and certainly not without justice. It was very extraordinary, and something far beyond what was looked for. Her extreme youth and inexperience, the Queen, though legally of age, was only just eighteen. She had much to learn to fit her for the exalted position to which she was so suddenly called. Previous to entering the Council room the Prime Minister, Lord MELBOURNE, had explained to Her Majesty the part she had to perform. Upon asking her if she would enter the Council room with the great officers of the State, she said she would come in alone. A deputation of the Lords was appointed to wait upon her in an adjoining room. They returned in a few minutes, when the royal proclamation was read. It was dated at Kensington the 20th of June, 1837. All the Lords of the Privy Council present signed the proclamation. Then the doors were thrown open and the Queen entered, accompanied by her two uncles, who had advanced to meet her. She bowed to the Lords and took her seat—an arm chair was her extemporised throne—and then read her speech in a clear, distinct, audible voice, and without any appearance of fear or embarrassment. She said "this awful responsibility is imposed upon me so suddenly, and at so early a period of my life that I should feel myself utterly oppressed by the burden were I not sustained by the hope and that Divine Providence, which has called me to this work will give me strength for the performance of it, and that I shall find in the purity of my intentions, and in my zeal for the public welfare, that support and those resources which usually belong to a more mature age and to long experience. I place my firm reliance in the wisdom of Providence, and upon the loyalty and affection of my people. * * * Educated in England, under the tender and solicitous care of a most affectionate mother, I have learned from my infancy to respect and love the constitution of my native country. It will be my increasing study to maintain the reformed religion, as by law established, securing at the same time, to all the full enjoyment of religious liberty. I shall steadily protect the rights and promote, to the utmost of my power, the happiness and welfare of all classes of my subjects." How truly the girl-Queen kept her word, those who have been spared to see the Jubilee year of her reign can fully testify.

Here it may not be out of place to quote a tiny extract from Lord BEACONSFIELD'S description of the scene at the first council meeting under the Victoria era. "The prelates," says BEACONSFIELD, "and chief men of her realm then advanced to the throne, and kneeling before her pledged their troth, and took the sacred oath of allegiance and supremacy—allegiance to one who rules over the land that the great Macedonian could not conquer, and over a continent of which even COLUMBUS never dreamed; to the Queen of every sea, and of nations of every zone. Fair and serene she has the blood and beauty of the Saxon. Will it be her proud destiny at length to bear relief to suffering millions, and with that soft hand which might inspire troubadour and guerdon knights, to break the last link in the Saxon thraldom!" GREVILLE says she was quite plainly dressed and in mourning. After she had read her speech and taken and signed the oath for the security of the Church of Scotland, administered by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Privy Councillors were sworn; the two Royal Dukes first, by themselves, and as these old men, her uncles, knelt before her, swearing allegiance and kissing her hand, I saw her blush up to the eyes, as if she felt the contrast between their civil and their natural relations; and this was the only sign of emotion that she evinced. Her manner to them was very graceful and engaging; she kissed them both and rose from her chair and moved towards the Duke of SUSSEX, who was furthest from her, and too infirm to reach her. She seemed rather bewildered at the multitude of men who were sworn, and who came one after the other to kiss her hand; but she did not speak to anybody, nor did she make the slightest difference in her manner or show any in her countenance to any individual of any rank, station or party. I particularly watched her when MELBOURNE and the Ministers, and the Duke of WELLINGTON and PEEL, approached her.

And thus began the extraordinary reign of our beloved Queen Victoria, whose Jubilee the whole British Empire will begin to-day to celebrate. From the first she placed implicit confidence in Lord MELBOURNE, and when a change of government took place and it became necessary according to constitutional usage to make a change in her attendant Ladies in Waiting for the first time she displayed a spirit slightly rebellious. But she had to yield ultimately, as Sir ROBERT PEEL was determined that his prerogative in this matter should be respected even by his sovereign. Thereafter it is not on record that she displayed any hostile feeling to her ministers.

On the 13th of July, 1837, the Queen left forever the home of her childhood at Kensington and took up her residence at Buckingham Palace. Here the maiden Queen established her court. On the 17th of July she proceeded in state to dissolve her first parliament. The royal procession was a grand affair, and on the 20th of November following, opened the first parliament of her reign. The coronation took place on the 28th of June, 1838, and never in England was such a gorgeous scene witnessed before.

The next eventful affair in Her Majesty's reign was her betrothal and marriage to the late and lamented Prince CONSORT, her full cousin. This event she announced to her Privy Councillors on the 23rd of November, at Buckingham Palace, in 1839, as well as to the country and the world when opening parliament in person on the 16th July, 1840. The event took place on the 10th of February following. It was a genuine love affair. That the alliance was a happy one none can doubt, for those who have read "Leaves from the Queen's Journal," or "The Life of the Prince CONSORT" can come to any other conclusion than that it was a marriage designed by Heaven. Prince ALBERT the Good proved to be as good a husband and father as his Queen was a wife and mother. A pleasant incident is related in one of the above works in connection with the birth of the Prince of WALES which reveals the domestic happiness that reigned then in the Royal household. The birth of the Prince of WALES was hailed with delight by the British nation at large, as well as by his royal parents. In her Journal in reference to that event, Her Majesty wrote: "ALBERT brought in dear little Pussy (the Princess ROYAL) in such a smart white merino dress trimmed with blue, which mamma had given her, and placed her on my bed, seating himself near to her, and she was very dear and good; and as my precious, invaluable ALBERT sat there, and our little love between us, I felt quite moved in the happiness and gratitude to God." Of the Prince CONSORT'S subsequent life, and of the gracious manner in which he filled his difficult position, completely overcoming the feeling of prejudice that had at first and for some years existed against him, it is unnecessary to write. He was a wise counsellor to the Queen and to the nation, for it is certain that were it not for his forethought and diplomacy Britain would have been drawn into a conflict with the United States during their civil war. His death occurred on December 14, 1861, and filled the nation with such a profound sorrow as no previous royal death had occasioned, and casting a gloom over Her Majesty which she has never been able to wholly dispel. The fruit of the union of these royal parents was nine children—five daughters and four sons, of whom one of each, the beloved Prin-

THE STORY OF A MINE.

BY BRET HARTE.

(Copyrighted, 1888, by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and published by arrangements with them.)

CHAPTER IV.

WHO TOOK IT.

DR. GUILD.

THERE was presistent neighing on the summit. Concho's horse wanted his breakfast.

This protestation reached the ears of a party ascending the mountain from its western face. To one of the party it was familiar.

"Why, blank it all, that's Chiquita. That d—— Mexican's lying drunk somewhere," said the president of the B. M. Co.

"I don't like the look of this at all," said Dr. Guild, as they rode up beside the indignant animal. "If it had been an American, it might have been carelessness, but no Mexican ever forgets his beast. Drive ahead, boys; we may be too late."

In half an hour they came in sight of the ledge below, the crumbled furnace, and the motionless figure of Concho, wrapped in a blanket, lying prone in the sunlight.

"I told you so—drunk!" said the president.

The doctor looked grave, but did not speak. They dismounted and picketed their horses. Then crept on all fours to the ledge above the furnace. There was a cry from Secretary Gibbs. "Look yer. Some fellar has been jumping us, boys. See these notices."

There were two notices on canvas affixed to the rock, claiming the ground, and signed by Pedro, Manuel, Miguel, Wiles and Roscommon.

"This was done, doctor, while your trustworthy Grosser locater—d——n him—lay there drunk. What's to be done, now?"

But the doctor was making his way to the unfortunate cause of their defeat, lying there quite mute to their reproaches. The others followed him.

The doctor knelt beside Concho, unrolled him, placed his hand upon his wrist, his ear over his heart, and then said:

"Dead."

"Of course. He got medicine of you last night. This comes of your d——d heroic practice."

But the doctor was too much occupied to heed the speaker's raillery. He had peered into Concho's protuberant eye, opened his mouth, and gazed at the swollen tongue, and then suddenly rose to his feet.

"Tear down those notices, boys, but keep them. Put up your own. Don't be alarmed; you will not be interfered with, for here is murder added to robbery."

"Murder!"

"Yes," said the doctor, excitedly, "I'll take my oath on any inquest that this man was strangled to death. He was surprised while asleep. Look here." He pointed to the revolver, still in Concho's stiffening hand, which the murdered man had instantly cocked, but could not use in the struggle.

"That's so," said the president; "no man goes to sleep with a cocked revolver. What's to be done?"

"Everything," said the doctor. "This deed was committed within the last two hours; the body is still warm. The murderer did not come our way, or we should have met him on the trail. He is, if anywhere, between here and Tres Pinos."

"Gentlemen," said the president, with a slight preparatory and half judicial cough, "two of you will stay here and stick! The others will follow me to Tres Pinos. The law has been outraged. You understand the court!"

By some odd influence the little group of half-cynical, half-trifling and wholly reckless men had become suddenly sober, earnest citizens. They said: "Go on," nodded their heads, and betook themselves to their horses.

"Had we not better wait for the inquest and swear out a warrant?" said the secretary, cautiously.

"How many men have we?"

"Five."

"Then," said the president, summing up the Revised Statutes of the state of California in one strong sentence, "then we don't want no d—d warrant."

CHAPTER V.

WHO HAD A LIEN ON IT.

ROSCOMMON'S.

THE time was noon at Tres Pinos. The three pines from which it gained its name, in the dusty road and hot air, seemed to smoke from their balsamic spires. There was a glare from the road, a glare from the sky, a glare from the rocks, a glare from the white canvas roofs of the few shanties and cabins which made up the village. There was even a glare from the unpainted redwood boards of Roscommon's grocery and tavern, and a tendency of the warping floor of the veranda to curl up beneath the feet of the intruder. A few mules, near the watering trough, had shrunk within the scant shadow of the corral.

"Then we don't want no d—d warrant."

The grocery business of Mr. Roscommon, although adequate and sufficient for the village, was not exhausting or overtaxing to the proprietor. The refilling of the pork and flour barrel of the average miner was the work of a brief hour on Saturday nights, but the daily replenishment of the average miner with whisky was arduous and incessant. Roscommon spent more time behind his bar than his grocer's counter. Add to this the fact that a long shed-like extension or wing bore the legend, "Cosmopolitan Hotel, Board or Lodging by the Day or Week. M. Roscommon," and you got an idea of the variety of the proprietor's functions. The "hotel," however, was more directly under the charge of Mrs. Roscommon, a lady of thirty years, strong, truculent and good-hearted.

Mr. Roscommon had early adopted the theory that most of his customers were insane, and were to be alternately bullied or placated, as the case might be. Nothing that occurred, no extravagance of speech nor act, ever ruffled his equilibrium, which was as dogged and stubborn as it was outwardly calm. When not serving liquor, or in the interval while it was being drunk, he was always wiping his counter with an exceedingly dirty towel—or indeed anything that came handy. Miners, noticing this purely perfunctory habit, occasionally supplied him shly with articles inconsistent with their service—fragments of their shirts and underclothing, flour sacking, tow, and once with a flannel petticoat of his wife's stolen from the line in the back yard. Roscommon would continue his wiping without looking up, but yet conscious of the presence of each customer.

"And it's not another dhrop ye'll git, Jack Brown, until ye've wiped out the black score that stands agin ye." "And it's there ye are, darlint, and it's here's the bottle that's been lukin' for ye sins Saturday." "And fwhot hev you done with the last I sent ye, ye divil of a McCorkle, and heres me back that's brukuntiorely wid dipping into the pork barl to giv ye the best sides, and ye spending yur last cint on a tare into Gilroy. Whist! and if it's for foighting ye are, boys, there's an illigant bit of sod beyant the corral, and it may be meself 'll come out with a shtick and be sociable."

On this particular day, however, Mr. Roscommon was not in his usual spirits, and when the clatter of horses' hoofs before the door announced the approach of strangers, he absolutely ceased wiping his counter and looked up as Dr. Guild, the president and secretary of the new company strode into the shop.

"We are looking," said the president, "for a man by the name of Wiles, and three Mexicans known as Pedro, Manuel and Miguel."

"Ye are!"

"We are!"

"Faix, and I hope ye'll foind 'em. And if ye'll git from 'em the score I've got agin 'em darlint, I'll add a blessing to it."

There was a laugh at this from the bystanders, who, somehow, resented the intrusion of these strangers.

"I fear you will find it no laughing matter, gentlemen," said Dr. Guild, a little stiffly, "when I tell you that a murder has been committed, and the man I am seeking within an hour of that murder put up that notice signed by their names," and Dr. Guild displayed the paper.

There was a breathless silence among the crowd as they eagerly pressed around the doctor. Only Roscommon kept on wiping his counter.

"You will observe, gentlemen, that the name of Roscommon also appears on this paper as one of the original locaters."

"And sure, darlint," said Roscommon, without looking up, "if ye've no better ividence agin thim boys than you have forninst me, it's home ye'd betther be riding to wanst. For it's meself as hasn't stirred fut out of the store the day and noight—more betoken as the boys I've sarved k'n testify."

"That's so; Ross's right," chorused the crowd. "We've been running the old man all night."

"Then how comes your name on this paper?"

"O murdher! will ye listen to him, boys! As if every felly that owed me a whisky bill didn't come to me and say: 'An, Misther Roscommon,' or 'Molke,' as the case might be, 'sure it's an illighant shtrike I've made this day, and it's meself that has put down your name as an original locater, and yer fortune's made Mr. Roscommon, and will yer fill me up another quart for the good luck betune you and me.' Ah, but ask Jack Brown over yan if it isn't sick that I am of his original locations."

The laugh that followed this speech, and its practical application, convinced the party that they had blundered, that they could obtain no clew to the real culprits here, and that any attempt by threats would meet violent opposition. Nevertheless the doctor was persistent.

"When did you see these men last?"

"When did I see them, is it? Bedad, what with sarvin up the liquor and keeping me counters dry and swate, I never see them at all."

"That's so, Ross," chorused the crowd again, to whom the whole proceeding was delightfully farcical.

"Then I can tell you, gentlemen," said the doctor, stiffly, "that they were in Monterey last night, that they did not return on that trail this morning, and that they must have passed here at daybreak."

With these words, which the doctor regretted as soon as delivered, the party rode away.

Mr. Roscommon resumed his service and counter wiping. But late that night, when the bar was closed and the last loiterer was summarily ejected, Mr. Roscommon, in the conjugal privacy of his chamber produced a legal looking paper. "Read it, Maggie darlint, for it's meself never had the larning nor the parts."

Mistress Roscommon took the paper:

"Shure, it's law papers, making over some property to yis. O Molke! ye hav'n't been speklating!"

"Whist! and fwhots that durty gray paper wid the inks and flourishes!"

"Faix, it bothers me intoirely. Shure it ain't in English."

"What! Maggie, it's a Spanish grant!"

"A Spanish grant! O Molke, and what did ye giv for it?"

Mr. Roscommon laid his finger beside his nose, and said softly, "Whishky!"

—Athletic Suits at Jeffree's.

—NEW ARRIVALS—Gents' English leggings in great variety; also DAY & MARTIN'S celebrated blacking, in tins and bottles, at Erskine's Boot and Shoe Emporium, corner Government and Johnson, St.

—Dr. A. C. West, dentist, will for the present occupy dental rooms in Hastings Photographic buildings, Fort street, where his old patrons and all requiring fine dental work, are respectfully invited to call.

—A young lad of this city created a scene at Beacon Hill last Saturday afternoon by racing with a notorious member of the demi monde. The moral suasion of a good birching might prove of some benefit as a stop to any such future actions.

—There was a very liberal display of bunting around town to-day. A commendable effort has been made by some to make the city look as attractive as possible and it is to be hoped their good example will be largely imitated to-morrow.

—The question has been asked us why the sham battle is not to be at and about the foot of the hill, so as to give the general public a chance to view the scene from the top of the hill? Simkins at our elbow says it is because the bould soldier boys don't want to be looked down upon. Good reason, isn't it?

School Trustees.

The nominations for vacancies at the School Board took place to-day. For James Bay Ward, Mr. D. R. Harris was elected by acclamation. His colleague is Mr. R. B. McMicking.

In Yates Street Ward, Messrs. Edward White and Chas. Hayward were nominated and go to the polls for the suffrage of the electors.

In Johnson Street Ward, His Worship Mayor Fell and Mr. J. B. Ferguson are the candidates. Dr. Morrison was nominated but as his name did not appear on the voters' list it was withdrawn. Electors should see to it that their names are registered, otherwise they will be debarred from exercising their franchise. The voting will take place next Thursday.

Black and Tan Cigars.

The Point of Attraction.

Beacon Hill will be the central point of attraction for our many visitors to-morrow. Recognizing the importance of making a favorable impression upon those who visit us, perhaps the first time, the proprietor of the Colonist (PAEE) Hotel have made every possible arrangement for their accommodation and refreshment. To our resident citizens who know the establishment it is only necessary to say that its usual good reputation will be fully sustained.

A Grand Excursion.

The date of the grand excursion from Tacoma to this city on the Olympian, to be given by the Presbyterian and Congregational Churches of Tacoma, has been set for July 7th. The fare for the round trip will be $2. All those people living on the other side who attend Tacoma's great 4th of July celebration can, by remaining over one day, visit Victoria. The boat will leave for this place at 5 o'clock a. m., and it is expected will arrive at its destination about noon of that day. The excursionists will remain in Victoria several hours and will arrive back in Tacoma about midnight. Amusements of various kinds will enliven the trip, and it will be seen that time does not hang heavy on the hands of anyone.

An Important Omission.

A morning contemporary in its account of the interview recently between the Mayor and Council and Mr. Robert Dunsmuir, omits a very important part of the conversation that took place between His Worship and the local railway magnate. Mr. Dunsmuir said that it would not pay him to bring the line into the city by way of the proposed Cormorant street swing bridge. His Worship made the suggestion that in order to recoup himself for the expenditure made, Mr. Dunsmuir should increase the passenger fare over the line. Mr. Barnard strongly objected to this being done, and expressed surprise at the Mayor making such a suggestion.

An Unexpected Response.

Last evening the Rev. Mr. Starr in the course of his sermon at the Methodist Church remarked that many people were away who should be present, and again, many who were present might not again attend for years. The divine and the congregation were startled to hear a female voice from the body of the church respond: "I hope you are not alluding to me just because I have'nt been here for seven years! The person speaking turned out to be Margaret Wheeler, better known as "Nigger Mag," who was quietly, but firmly, led down the aisle and out of the church.

A C. P. R. Official.

E. S. Anderson, of Montreal, general baggage agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, arrived on the Sound last Friday, having come from San Francisco over the O. & C. P. R. He reports that arrangements are complete by which the C. P. R. company can check for passengers over their road through baggage to any point of destination in the United States or Canada, and that, as has been the case for some time, there is no examination of passengers' baggage by custom house officers on British or American soil.

Ventriloquism.

Prof. King Kennedy, one of the greatest illusionists and ventriloquists of the present day, has arrived in the city over the C. P. R. and will, it is understood, give one of his marvellous exhibitions in the near future. His illusions are described by the eastern press as "first class in every respect and performed in a most gentlemanly manner." It is further stated that "his ventriloquist performance has never been excelled" and doubtless superior to anything of the kind ever witnessed in this city.

Tony Cigars.

From M. Sullivan, M. D., President of the Medical Association of Canada: Kingston, Oct. 19, 1883.—From conversations with Mr. Laurance, examination of his accurate, varied and highly finished glasses, together with observation of cases benefitted, I have pleasure in strongly recommending him as a gentleman worthy of entire confidence. M. SULLIVAN, M. D. B. Laurance's spectacles sold only by D. E. Campbell, Fort street.

Married.

Mr. James Stuart, Ashcroft, was married to Miss Jeannie Duke, third daughter of the late Philip Parke, of County Sligo, Ireland, and grand-niece of the late Sir Valentine Duke of the same county, on the 15th inst. The interesting ceremony was performed by Rev. Alfred Shildrick, of Kamloops, at the residence of Mr. Phillip Parke, Bonaparte, B. C. The happy couple left here for San Francisco by the last steamer.

Railway and Navigation Guide.

The June number of this useful publication is before us. It contains seventy-eight pages, mostly advertisements, but also a considerable amount of information about railway and steamboat transportation on this coast. The publishers are A. M. Bannerman & Co., and the manager G. A. Perrin.

To be Knighted.

The many friends of Mr. J. G. Norris, of Kootenay, will be pleased to learn that he is likely to meet with a mark of Her Most Gracious Majesty's favor by being raised to the position of a Knight of the Most Noble Order of St. Michael. Mr. Norris is well worthy of the distinguished honor and it will meet with the hearty approval of his numerous friends.

From Portland.

The Sardonyx, Captain Meyer, arrived from Portland Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. The voyage over occupied thirty-two hours. She brought one passenger for this city. Amongst her freight were 2000 sacks of flour for the Orient per the Abyssinia, and 1380 sacks of flour and other merchandise for this port.

JERSEYS! JERSEYS! JERSEYS! The latest styles received this day at the "Lansdowne House," Yates Street.

A Capital Suggestion.

It has been suggested that it would be a wise move on the part of the management, to arrange so that carriages may be kept at a reasonable distance from where the bulk of pedestrians will be during the sham fight on Beacon Hill to-morrow. We hope it will be acted on.

They've Come.

Get the Best.

Parties about to purchase a safe should see to it that they get the best, which in the long run is the cheapest. In this city there are a great many American made safes, which are of little value against the burglar or the fire fiend. No better proof of this need be asked for than an inspection of the safe now lying in the ruins of the Empire brewery, Spring Ridge. The late Mr. Peters bought this safe as a first-class one. It was of American manufacture and slightly cheaper than the home made article. Instead of being constructed of first-class material, case-hardened steel plates, &c., &c., it is proved that the frame is of grey or cast iron, the covering or outside sheeting of Russian sheet iron, at the back of which is a thin coating of plaster of Paris, and then another layer of sheet iron. The whole affair is constructed in this manner and palmed off on the public as a genuine good safe. After the fire it was found that the heat had cracked the cast iron in many places, as well as twisting the sheet iron into all shapes. The contents of the safe were scorched and many of the papers reduced to tinder. In marked contrast to these are the safes made by the J. & J. Taylor firm of Toronto, whose fame is now world-wide, and whose business is yearly increasing. Beginning in a small way in Toronto, in the early forties, this firm has survived all others in that line of manufacture; all owing to the general excellence of its goods. Their burglar proof safes are now made of the best five-ply welded chrome steel iron, supplied with rubber tube packing and eccentric lever bars, to prevent the use of explosives, and locked with their unrivaled four-wheel combination locks, built in spindles and bolt handles. Salamander like the safes of the Messrs. Taylor have passed through innumerable fires and everywhere with the most satisfactory results. In brief, none better are in the market, or made in the world. Mr. R. D. Robbins, the general agent of the company, who had a brief but satisfactory visit to this city, left for the east this morning. Messrs. M. W. Waitt & Co. are agents for the Messrs. Taylor & Co., in this province.

The Festivities.

Special jubilee festivities will be held this evening in the Cathedral Church Hill, beginning at 8 o'clock.

To-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, the yacht race will start. The course being outside the harbor it will be necessary for the spectator to take his stand somewhere between the outer wharf and Beacon Hill.

At 2 o'clock the militia forces under Lieut.-Col. Wolfenden, will join the naval brigade in a general review and sham fight. It is a difficult matter to decide where this can be best witnessed from, but the attack can no doubt be seen to the most advantage by taking up a position near the edge of the woods towards Clover Point as the smoke will be blown away from that direction.

Grand illumination of the naval fleet at Esquimalt, time, 9:30 p. m. It is understood that special conveyances will be provided for those desiring to go down and see the illumination.

The committee have obtained permission from Mr. Yates to have Curtis' point thrown open to the public during the Jubilee celebration.

Vancouver Water Works.

Several of those largely interested in the Vancouver water works scheme of bringing a supply into the city from the Capilano held a meeting last week in that city. It was resolved to proceed with the work at once. At present two engineering parties are on the ground surveying and making cross sections preparatory to beginning operations. The company have decided upon laying three pipes across the Narrows, one of which will be a 14-inch main and the other two each 8 inches. Financially the company is a strong one. The work will be vigorously prosecuted so as to have water in the city early in the incoming spring. On the west side of the Inlet a head of 460 feet will be secured. This it is believed will be the best system on the coast, if not on the continent. The source of supply is never-failing and the water of the very best quality.

Catarrah, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp, by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 King street West, Toronto, Canada.—Christian Standard.

An Eligible Candidate.

Among the candidates for the position of school trustee we observe the name of Mr. J. B. Ferguson. Mr. F. at one time was principal of a school engaging twenty-six teachers, and for some time was an inspector of schools in Manitoba—a training that fits him for the important position of trustee. We believe he will prove the right man in the right place.

Formal Opening.

The formal opening of the JUBILEE SALOON, Messrs. Decker & Smith proprietors, will take place this evening. The place has been handsomely decorated with flags and evergreens. A cordial welcome will be extended by the proprietors to their many friends and the public generally. Free lunch; beer 5c.

Coming.

An eastern exchange states that the Rev. J. W. Wadman, formerly of Charlottetown, P. E. I., who has had charge of the Carleton, N. B., Methodist Church during the past three years, and who has been transferred to the British Columbia conference, will leave for Victoria, B. C., about the first of July. Mr. Wadman is described as an able preacher.

The Occidental.

Mr. W. Croft has purchased the business of the Occidental from Mr. Joseph Bayley, who has so ably conducted it for the past year or two. Mr. Croft will make an excellent landlord, and under his management the reputation of this popular house will be fully maintained.
